“If women study, whole nation will study”

ABSTRACT

The study of foreign languages among women is a topic that is relevant for many people in today's world. The study of foreign languages is one of the aspects of great importance for the development of human relations in the global environment, obtaining legal and economic benefits, education and reading systems.

The fact that we spread the mastery of foreign languages in our country more between women and girls is equivalent to the fact that we spread among the population of our entire country. Because every girl who knows a foreign language, a woman in the future will certainly bring up a child who has mastered some foreign language in his family as his native language.

In this article, I will explain why it is important for every woman and girl to learn foreign languages.

KEYWORDS

Knowledge of foreign languages, upbringing of children, career opportunities.

INTRODUCTION

The study of foreign languages has become increasingly important in today's globalized world, with a growing need for individuals to communicate with people from different cultural backgrounds. Knowledge of a foreign language, as our ancestors said, "Someone who knows world languages, he or she knows whole world", has a positive effect on the worldview of the learner, as well as providing countless opportunities.

In our country, great attention is paid to the study of the Uzbek and foreign language. As a vivid example, we can cite the signing of resolution PQ-5117 of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan dated 19.05.2021 "On measures to bring the activities of popularization of foreign language learning to a qualitatively new level in the Republic of Uzbekistan". In particular, women can greatly benefit from learning foreign languages, as it can provide them with enhanced job prospects, greater cultural understanding, and the ability to connect with people from different backgrounds.

DISCUSSION

So, there is a chance and it is necessary to be able to take full advantage of it. Below we will talk about why women learn a foreign language, its benefits and difficulties

- Reasons for studying foreign languages and opportunities they can offer

One important reason for women to study foreign languages is the significant impact it can have on their career opportunities. In today's competitive job market, being proficient in a foreign language can be a valuable asset, as it can make a candidate stand out from the crowd. With so many businesses expanding into global markets, there is a growing need for employees with language skills to communicate with international partners and customers. Women who are able to speak a foreign language fluently therefore increase their chances of being hired by multinational companies, and can also take advantage of job opportunities in industries such as tourism and international development.

Another reason, as we mentioned above, is that a learned woman brings up a learned child. In the Uzbek family, mainly in the upbringing of children, the role of a woman - mother plays a crucial role. If a mother knows any foreign language, her child also has knowledge (90-100% proficiency) in the same language. Because lullaby, much of the various family communications are conducted in that foreign language, and the child from an early age becomes an excellent speaker of that language.

Beyond career prospects, the study of foreign languages can also provide women with a valuable opportunity to gain greater cultural understanding. Learning a new language involves delving into the customs, traditions, and beliefs of a different culture, which can broaden an individual's perspectives and help them become more culturally sensitive. This can be especially beneficial for women who may find themselves working or traveling in different countries and need to interact with people from diverse cultural backgrounds. Additionally, it can help women to develop empathy and understanding towards people who may be different from themselves, creating an inclusive and supportive environment.

Moreover, the study of foreign languages can also be conducive to building social connections and fostering personal growth. Learning a new language can help women to connect with people from different backgrounds and open up new possibilities for travel and cultural exchange. It can also encourage self-improvement and discipline, such as developing time management skills to schedule regular study sessions and practice speaking with native speakers. These skills can also be useful in other areas of life, such as work and personal relationships.

- Challenges

While there are many reasons why women should study foreign languages, there are also several factors that may make it more difficult for them to do so. Women may have more household responsibilities, such as caring for children or elderly family members, which can restrict their time and resources for language study.

In addition, language course fees can be quite expensive, which may be a barrier for some women who are unable to afford such courses. It is therefore important for governments and organizations to provide funding and support for women to learn foreign languages, as this can have a significant impact on their personal and professional development, as well as the wider community.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, learning foreign languages can greatly benefit women by enhancing their job prospects, cultural understanding, and personal growth. While there may be challenges to overcome, it is important to encourage and support women in learning languages, as this can have a positive impact on both their individual development and the wider community. By empowering women through foreign language education, we can build a more inclusive and interconnected world.
