Abstract: In the process of globalization that is taking place today, the effective use of human capital has become a pressing issue for all countries. In particular, the importance of education in the effective use of resources is increasingly being proven. In such conditions, the development of each country depends, first of all, on human capital, knowledge and education of the younger generation. In particular, Uzbekistan is carrying out educational reforms, ensuring the continuity of education and upbringing for tomorrow's development. Today, students sitting at school desks not only learn, but also deeply understand human values, which will create a foundation for them to mature as individuals who benefit society. Just as the great goal of creating the foundation of the Third Renaissance in new Uzbekistan is a beacon for noble reforms, spiritual education in the minds of young people will also guide them to use knowledge for good.

Keywords: Renaissance, patriotism, reforms, human capital, humanity, spirituality, involvement, responsibility.

Introduction: At the center of the large-scale reforms being implemented in the new Uzbekistan are issues of human dignity, quality of education, and spiritual upbringing. After all, only a society that deeply feels today's responsibility can take a bold step towards tomorrow's development. A prosperous life will be built if each individual, as a citizen, organizes every action with a sense of involvement and responsibility for the fate of the nation and homeland. This sense of involvement is achieved not just through plans, but through systematic actions. In particular, it is necessary to form it among young students by setting a personal example. The fact that has been proven in practice is that young students involuntarily repeat what they see in practice more than what they hear.

METHODS

Today, young people sitting at school desks will grow up to be specialists, leaders, scientists and intellectuals working in various spheres of society tomorrow. That is why it is important for them to grow up not only as educated people, but also as patriots, responsible and highly spiritual people. Because knowledge serves the interests of society only when combined with education. Otherwise, there is a risk of using knowledge for the wrong purposes. Therefore, ensuring the continuity of education and upbringing has become a priority direction of state policy today.

The concept of responsibility occupies a special place in human life. Responsibility is a person's deep understanding of his duty and mission and a sincere approach to it. If the family, school and society can instill this quality in the minds of young people, a solid foundation will be created for future development. Especially since today's youth are growing up under the influence of the Internet and mass media, their minds also require protection from various harmful ideas. In this sense, spiritual education is becoming more important than ever.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

As the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev noted: "Education and upbringing are the most important issues that decide not only today, but also tomorrow of any state and society." This idea is based on a great life truth. Because the main factor of development is conscious, educated and selfless people. Only a state that invests in human capital can achieve long-term growth. Therefore, fundamental reforms are being carried out in the system from preschool education to higher education in New Uzbekistan. At the end of 2019, the international magazine "ECONOMIST" declared Uzbekistan the "Country of the Year". This rating is not announced on its own, it was motivated by such positive aspects as protecting children from forced labor and educational reforms. Today, the establishment of modern schools, Presidential schools, creative and specialized educational institutions serves to identify talented students and further develop their intellectual potential. However, knowledge alone is not enough. The formation of such qualities as love for the Motherland, loyalty to the interests of the people, honesty and hard work in the hearts of young people is also an important task. For this reason, patriotic months and reading weeks have been implemented and have become an integral part of the agenda. Because a spiritually mature person will not deviate from the path of goodness in any situation. The idea of the "Third Renaissance" is also based on the harmony of science and spirituality. The great scholars who lived and worked during the First and Second Renaissance were not only knowledgeable, but also possessed high morals and decency. Our ancestors, such as Imam Bukhari, Abu Rayhan Beruni, Ibn Sina, Mirzo Ulugbek, who used science to serve the interests of humanity, left an indelible mark on history. Therefore, today's youth must also feel a deep sense of responsibility to become a generation worthy of them.

Today's responsibility is not only the responsibility of the state or the education system. This is the duty of every parent, teacher, and citizen. Our wise people have a saying that "No child is a stranger." Indeed, Uzbekistan is spending its resources on the young generation, both materially and spiritually. In response, we need to instill spiritual and educational work in the hearts of young people and educate a truly spiritually mature generation. This can be our worthy response to today's opportunities.

Today, global problems such as ecology, corruption, unemployment, and spiritual threats also require great responsibility from people. Humanity, environmental protection, respect for the law, and putting the interests of society above personal interests are the duty of every citizen. If every person responsibly approaches his work with a sense of involvement in the fate of the homeland, order, progress, and prosperity will prevail in society. In this way, we guarantee our sustainable future.

CONCLUSIONS

In conclusion, today's responsibility is a solid foundation for tomorrow's development. What the future will be like depends on what kind of upbringing and education today's youth receive. Therefore, every person should set high goals for themselves and serve the prosperity of the Motherland wholeheartedly. After all, only a responsible generation will build a prosperous future with a sense of involvement in the fate of the homeland. Creating the foundation of the Third Renaissance requires knowledge, dedication, and high spirituality from each of us. Just as the great goal of creating the foundation of the Third Renaissance in new Uzbekistan is a beacon for noble reforms, spiritual education in the minds of young people will also guide them to use knowledge for good.
