INTRODUCTION

First, let's define the concept of legal education. Legal education is the process of inculcating the knowledge of law into the behavior culture and consciousness of society members by constantly influencing them in a purposeful way². Demak, bundan kelib chiqib aytish mumkinki, huquqiy tarbiya huquqqa oid bilimlarni doimiy oshirib borish, jamiyat a'zolarining huquqiy ongi va huquqiy madaniyatini rivojlantirish va shu orqali chinakam fuqarolik jamiyati qurish.

Legal culture is people's level of legal knowledge, conscious attitude towards law, respect for law and compliance with it³. Legal culture is an integral part of the general culture of society. Therefore, legal culture has a broad meaning. The legal life of the society shows its legal status and level of legal consciousness. The legal culture of the society is manifested in the ability of citizens to use their rights and freedoms and fulfill their obligations. The legal culture of society is determined by the level of strength of the existing legal order in the country.

Another factor that shows the legal image of society is the legal consciousness of citizens. Legal consciousness is, first of all, a source of law that expresses the needs of society. Secondly, it is one of the necessary factors of applying the law to social reality. Thirdly, it helps to understand the extent to which the behavior of individuals complies with legal norms and serves as an evaluation tool.

Legal education. It is known that a person receives his first upbringing in his mother's arms. It is inevitable that the first education (family education) is the most important education.⁴ Family education, especially legal education, is absorbed into the child's mind from a young age. This makes it easier for the child to get legal education. Legal education in the family is the responsibility of parents, and first of all, parents should also have legal knowledge. Legal education is explained to young children in the form of a game, while it is explained to adult children on the basis of rules. Because it is easier for young children to learn the rules through the game. And since the children of the age of puberty have grown up and understand what the law is, it is better to explain the laws to them. Legal education should be well established in schools. It must be admitted that the teaching of legal sciences in schools today is not at the level of quality. The main reason for this is the lack of study hours. I believe that studying only one hour a week is not enough to learn this subject in depth. Not everyone is eager to teach this subject due to the limited number of class hours. And it is not studied with interest by students. But this situation cannot be a reason for not being able to study law well. A person should study independently, be aware of constant news, and keep up with the times. Only then will he witness what opportunities are being created for his development, and he himself will use these opportunities.

Self-education. The thought we mentioned above can also be an example of self-discipline. A person can educate himself by observing the events of life. That is, what are the results of people who know their rights and obligations, obey the constitution and laws, and make good use of the created conditions, and what is the fate of people who are supporters of weak legal nihilism, ignore the existing laws, and do as they please is it late He should learn these things and try not to repeat the mistakes made by others. As a person develops as a person, he begins to find his place in society and enter into legal relations. Self-education is the basis of how a person will develop into a person in the future. Because when a person draws conclusions from the surrounding events and gets good information, this person develops into a mature, legally aware person in society. The main idea of our Honorable President is to educate the young generation. Otherwise, punishment for the crime is inevitable.

According to Article 20 of the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan, "Citizens must not harm the legitimate interests, rights and freedoms of other persons, the state and society while exercising their rights and freedoms."⁵ This is not for nothing, because if a citizen does not take a legal approach to exercising his rights, the interests of other citizens may be harmed. Therefore, increasing legal knowledge among citizens is an important issue. Let's imagine that if every citizen was fully aware of his rights and obligations, there would be no increase in violations and crimes in the society. Therefore, the basis of legal education is to increase the level of legal literacy of citizens, and through this, to establish a legal democratic society.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, legal propaganda, legal education, legal practice and self-education, which are the means of legal education, should be carried out in an integral relationship. In order to establish a truly legal state and civil society, it is necessary to increase the legal literacy of the population, especially the youth. Today, the most common example of violation of rights is family violence, and as a result, children also become mentally weak and legally illiterate. Two young people without legal knowledge are suffering in situations such as early marriage and divorce. The child between them remains an orphan, and on the one hand, they are responsible for the mistakes of their parents. Or we can give an example of the fact that women are living in silence in situations where their rights are violated because they are afraid of being left on the street with their children or because they are afraid of being left with nothing. It can be concluded that legal education first of all begins with the family. How a child will grow up in the future also depends on the education he received in his family. Therefore, the most effective way to improve legal literacy is to conduct education and training together. The role of legal education in improving society is incomparable. Free-thinking, independent citizens who know their rights, especially young generations, young personnel are very important and necessary for the society, for the bright future of the society. In medicine, technology, culture, art, sports, etc., the masters of their profession and the holders of legal knowledge are of great importance in the development of our country. It is up to us to become a cultured nation, a legally literate state recognized by the world. Not forgetting this, we should work hard on ourselves and share knowledge with other people as much as we can.
