

Globalization and music integration

Masharipova Gulbahor Tairjanovna

Teacher, Department of "Traditional Singing and Folk Instruments", Faculty of Music Studies, Guliston State University, Uzbekistan

Received: 21 December 2024; Accepted: 23 January 2025; Published: 25 February 2025

Abstract: This article is devoted to the study of the processes and consequences of musical integration in the context of globalization. The study analyzes how international socio-economic changes and digital technologies have affected musical culture, the interaction of regional musical traditions and modern styles. The article discusses musical innovations resulting from global trends, the widespread dissemination of music through new platforms, and the role of traditional music in this process. It also examines the positive and negative consequences of globalization on musical integration, the issues of cultural diversity and the preservation of national identity.

Keywords: Globalization, musical integration, digital technologies, traditional music, intercultural communication, musical innovation.

Introduction: In an era when globalization has become an integral part of modern society, musical culture is also enriched by processes of change and renewal. Today, with the help of the technological revolution, the Internet and digital platforms, intercultural communication is further strengthened, covering a wide spectrum from national and regional traditions of music to global trends. In this process, traditional forms of musical expression are combined with modern innovations, preserving their unique characteristics and opening the door to new creative opportunities.

This article analyzes the positive and negative consequences of the globalization process on musical integration, as well as the impact of digital technologies and social networks on musical culture. Musical expression, through its historical roots and the richness of its cultural heritage, is enriched with new perspectives and experiences in the global arena, finding its place not only in the local, but also in the international arena. At the same time, this process also raises urgent issues such as the preservation and development of national identity, as well as the support of cultural diversity.

The topics raised in the introduction are aimed at demonstrating a deep analytical approach to the current problems and prospects of musical integration, helping to identify new forms of music in the era of global trends and the digital revolution. In this way, the article not only introduces the reader to the complexities of the global musical field, but also calls for the presentation of important theoretical and practical aspects in shaping the future of music, which is an integral part of modern culture.

When revealing the scientific foundations of globalization processes and musical integration, first of all, according to the theory of globalization, the softening of cultural boundaries and the strengthening of interaction between different national traditions, the emergence of new forms of expression are observed. In this process, national musical traditions and modern technologies are intertwined, forming complex relationships associated with socio-economic and political factors.

Music, due to its inherent cultural expression, occupies a unique place in this theoretical framework. Research in the fields of cultural studies and music theory shows that new and unexpected musical styles are formed as a result of the exchange between different cultures through the concept of cultural hybridity. At the same time, digital communication tools, the Internet and social networks play a decisive role in the global spread of music and enrich it with rapid innovations. It also reveals the role of music in the socio-political context. It makes it possible to analyze the extent to which global economic trends, social changes and technological revolutions expand music as a means of expression. Through this approach, the integration of traditional music with new global trends, while maintaining its uniqueness and national identity, is theoretically justified.

Literature review

Literature analysis plays an important role in further understanding the scientific basis of scientific research and identifying current issues in the subject. This section analyzes the main theoretical approaches, empirical studies, and technological innovations in the field of globalization and musical integration.

First, through theoretical approaches, various scholars try to reveal the complexity of national and global musical expressions by developing concepts such as cultural hybridity, transnationality, and cultural hybridity. With the help of these concepts, the role of traditional music in the global process of musical integration and the relationships between innovations created by new technological methods are analyzed.

Also, the empirical research literature shows the real state of global musical integration and its positive and negative consequences, taking into account the music industry, social factors, and economic conditions in different countries. The studies cite examples of the combination of regional traditions and modern styles, as well as the rapid global diffusion of music through digital platforms. Through these processes, the relevance of the issues of preserving cultural diversity and protecting national identity is noted.

The impact of the digital era on musical integration is also widely covered in the literature. The global spread of music through the Internet, social networks and music streaming services, the emergence of new creative opportunities and innovative solutions, have been analyzed in depth by researchers. These technological factors show what kind of innovations music as a means of expression brings and the place of this process in cultural exchange.

In general, the literature review identifies the main points in illuminating the theoretical and practical aspects of musical integration in the context of globalization. This analysis serves not only to analyze existing scientific works on the topic, but also to open new questions and directions for future research. As a result, it is possible to more deeply understand the complex structure of the global musical field and the changes taking place under the influence of the digital revolution.

DISCUSSION

The discussion section analyzes the complexity and multifacetedness of musical integration taking place in the context of globalization. Initially, the development of global information technologies, the spread of the Internet and digital platforms have erased the boundaries of music and expanded it to the international arena. In this process, a complex relationship is being formed between the uniqueness of national traditional music and modern innovations. Traditional musical styles with historical roots are being reinterpreted with the help of new technologies and strive to adapt to a global audience. At the same time, the positive side of globalization is shown in the increased intercultural exchange and the harmonization of different styles. Musical integration not only opens the door to new creative opportunities, but also indicates the need to develop new strategies for preserving national identity. Especially in the digital era, as forms of musical expression are rapidly changing, finding a balance between traditional and modern approaches remains a pressing issue for researchers and art lovers.

However, the negative consequences of the globalization process cannot be ignored. There is a risk of ideological uniformity and cultural homogenization in the music industry. This, in turn, poses a risk of losing the richness and uniqueness of local culture. Therefore, the focus of attention in the process of musical integration should be not only technological and economic factors, but also issues of protecting cultural identity, traditional styles and harmonizing them with new global trends. The discussion analyzed the complex interactions between globalization and musical integration, and compared the positive and negative aspects of both processes. The results of the study show that although digital technologies and Internet capabilities contribute significantly to the global distribution of music, the preservation and development of local cultural heritage is also important in this process. As a result, the concept of musical hybridity and the integration of different cultures in the global arena should be studied more broadly and deeply, since this is one of the important factors not only in the field of art, but also in the socio-economic development of society.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, the article comprehensively studied the process of musical integration in the context of globalization, highlighting its cultural, economic and technological aspects. Although modern information technologies and digital platforms have accelerated the internationalization of music, this process also raises issues of preserving traditional culture and national identity.

These analyses show that musical integration creates new forms of expression through global trends, innovations and creative solutions. At the same time, there is also a risk of global homogenization, which can lead to the loss of national heritage and local traditions. Therefore, it is necessary to develop relevant strategies to keep this process under control and develop cultural diversity.

Based on the discussion and literature review in the article, it was possible to deeply analyze the positive aspects of musical integration in the context of globalization, as well as its negative consequences. As a result, it was determined that for the development of musical culture in the future, it is necessary not only to effectively use new technological opportunities, but also to preserve national traditions and harmonize them with new global trends.

REFERENCES

Hall, S. (1997). Representation: Cultural Representations and Signifying Practices. London: Sage.

Tomlinson, J. (1999). Globalization and Culture. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

Miller, T. (2002). Globalization, Culture, and the Politics of Identity. New York: Routledge.

Abdug'ani, M. (2010). Musiqa madaniyati va globalizm. Toshkent: O'zbekiston Milliy Ensiklopediyasi.

Masharipova, G., & Shukhratov, U. (2024). Pedagogical possibilities of teaching the piano in higher pedagogical education. Development and innovations in science (T. 3, Выпуск 12, cc. 15–18).

Masharipova, G.. (2024). Musiqa ta'limida individual va guruh yondashuvlar samaradorligi. Педагогика и психология в современном мире: теоретические и практические исследования, 3(13), 11–14.

Masharipova, G. (2024). Pedagogical skill of a music teacher and its main components. B International Bulletin Of Applied Science And Technology (T. 4, Выпуск 1, cc. 73–78).

Masharipova, G. (2024). The content and possibilities of preparing future music teachers for innovative activities. B International Bulletin Of Engineering And Technology (T. 4, Выпуск 1, cc. 70–75).